The New York Financier said Saturday: | pacity. Decreasing deposits and loss of cash holdngs are the distinguishing features of the New York bank statement for the week ending Oct. 5. The clearing house banks held last week only $151,496,400 in cash which is a loss of thirty-one millions since June 1 last, and of $31,386,000 since Aug. 31 last. This money represents in part the gold export movement, but more than anything else the demand for the interior. The actual loss for the week was $8,083,900, of which $739,600 was in specie and $7,344,300 legal tenders. Deposits are down to $540,-009,500, the loss for the week being $9,037,000. The deposits of the New York banks as reported for the last week are nearly fifty million dollars less than for the corresponding week in 1804. for the corresponding week in 1894. total sales of stocks Saturday were 55,500 shares, including: Sugar, 9,600; To-acco, 22,300: Atchison, 8,000; Chicago Gas, 7,200; Furlington, 4,500; Distilling, 3,000; Reading 5,800; Rock Island, 2,500; St. Paul, 7,600; Silver Certificates, 15,000; Tennessee Coal, 5,600; Texas Pacific, 2,700; United States Cordage, 5,500; Wheeling & Lake Puts

The stock market opened dull and lower Saturday. The reactionary movement did not make much headway, as good buying in Chicago Gas sent that stock up 1 per cent, and served to rafly the general list. Tobacco also displayed considerable weakness, dropping 1% per cent. for the lack of confirmation of the reported settlement between that trust and the large plug manufacturing interest. The general market and more especially the grangers was sympathetically depressed. Speculation left off weak in tone.

The course of prices for the week has been downward. At the outset a drop in foreign exchange occurred, caused by increased offerings of cotton bills and stopped the gold export discussion, resulting in a moderate rally in the general market. The improvement soon culminated, howwith the usual effect of such a condition, a weaker tendency to prices. An important negatively unfavorable influence on the speculation has been the concentration of interest at foreign financial centers in the boom in Kaffir gold mining shares, which has not only distracted attention from our securities, but has also compelled sales by foreign dealers to fortify osition. It left off at 167%. A temporary advance in call money rates to 3 per cent., which was not sustained, was also an incident, Further advances in anthracite coal prices are regarded as evidence that the control interest in the great corporations have become centralized. Chicago Gas, Tennessee Coal and Illinois Steel closed higher for the week. > Firm Cables and Some Disposition to Cover Old Sales Not Enough to Prevent Decline.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 .- Wheat was weak and weary to-day and the other markets followed suit. Compared with Friday's closing prices declines for the day amount to 1/2c in wheat, %c in October, 1/40%c in May corn; 4c in October, and 4c in May oats. The prices of provisions changed but slightly. Wheat ruled rather dull, but showed some strength during the first hour and sold up 16c above the close last night, then turned weak and fell off 11/3c and at the close was about %c. The opening public cables were firm and there was some disposition among shorts to cover. Frank Dunn was the leading buyer at the start and had a considerable following, December selling from 601/3c to 605/3c. But the demand was soon satisfied and the buying came to a halt when prices began to waver. Some of the early buyers began to unload; there was free short selling and as the market got little support there was a steady drop of 11%c from the top figures, December going to 591/4c. Northwestern receipts were again large, the exports were fully 500,000 bu smaller than the week previous and an increase of over 2,000,000 bu in the visible supply is predicted. Armour was said to be a heavy seller of wheat against his enormous purchases in the Northwest and the scalping element was quite bearish. The weakness in the Kaffir stock in Europe continues and had a depressing influence. Pardridg was a free seller early in the session, but was thought to have covered it on subsequent breaks. The estimate of twenty-five cars for Monday and probably liberal run all next week was the weak feature during the latter part of the session. December opened at 60%c, sold to 60%c, then broke to 591/c and closed at that price bid. The course of the fluctautions in corn merely reflected in a weak way the changes in the wheat market. Prices at the close compared with the first quotations of the compared with the first quotations of the day before, showed a decline of %c per bu in October, ½%c in December and ½%c in May. The closing price was: October, 30c; December, 29%29%c; May, 29%c.

Notwithstanding good buying, the oats market was easier in feeling and showed a decline of from %c to %c in October and December, while May fell off %c. The greater weakness in the near-by deliveries was in consequence of the large receipts and heavy estimates. May ranged from 20%20%c and ended at the low price.

There was the closest approach to complete stagnation in the speculative branch of the provision business that could be made without reaching a complete stoppage. Prices were nominally a trifle higher than closing prices on the day before, owing to the steady live hog market.

Estimates for Monday—Wheat, 265 cars; corn, 750 cars; oats, 550 cars; hogs, 31,000 head. ern sheep were wanted at $2.25@3.30, and prime heavy lot of Utah sheep sold yes-terady at $3.70. Lambs sold at $3.25@4.75 for common to choice. Receipts—Cattle, 800; calves, 20; hogs, 17,000; sheep, 5,000. EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 5. - Receipts of sale stock cattle, of odds and ends, about 3 loads. She was awaiting the coming of her affianced h band, George Maurice St. John. "Why doth he prove so dilatory?" she murmured. "Methinks no true lover would own such leaden feet."

As Angelina McLaurin arose to gaze from the window she rocked on the tail of the ample Angora cat. This cat made it a point to hang out in the library every afternoon. On this occasion, while Angelina was dreaming of her lover, the cat had taken advantage of her abstraction to deftly arrange his tail beder offerings by pit traders and closed at 18@18%c lower; October, 36%,@36%c, closing at 36%c; December, 35%@65%c, closing at neath the rocker of her chair. When Angelina arose, as stated, the cat got 'way the worst of it. As the rocker came down on the cat's tail the latter exploded into observations in Angorese that are unfit for these umns. Angelina was not only startled out of herself, but almost out of her frock. she and the cat both arose hastily and stood there panting.

> Just as the shrieks of the wronged extle from Angora were uplifted into space, the door of the library burst violently open. "What is the matter, dearest? Are you injured? Why did you cry for help?" It was George Maurice St. John who asked the questions. As he did so he caught Angelina McLaurin in his powerful arms, while the Angora cat, his worst fears now thoroughly aroused, chased himself down the hall with tail excited to the size of a lamp cleaner.

> "What is it, love?" asked George Maurice St. John, as he tenderly unloaded his delicious burden upon a sofa. "Speak-it is the voice of your George who bids you. Has any one dared pester with the coming bride of a St. John?" "Bear with me, Georgie," she whispered

> "Believe me, I will be better anon." After a few moments she recovered and was able to smile through her tears at the alarm of her dear one. Then she told George all. How the cat had been sucker enough to leave his tail lying around loose while he was asleep; how in the intensity of her waiting for him she had put a crimp in it with the fell rocker of the chair, and how the cat had been drawn into statements by sheer dint of his agony which it was impolitic as well as useless

> "So I was just in time, Angelina, to re lieve both you and the cat of what was doubtless an awkward situation." George Maurice St. John laughed gaily. Then he kissed her with a fervor that left nothing to wish for, and Angelina took a brace and sat erect on the sofa.
> "I feel better now," she remarked. George tried to get in another kiss, but she stood him off. 'Don't crowd your luck, dear," she said with a sweet softness. "I am yours forever, and there's not the slightest cause for any excess of osculatory zeal. You're to have me with you always, so set a brake or two and take the grades easy."

"And your queen wants straight goods this time and no guff. Oh, darling," continued Angelina McLaurin in a passionate burst, "be square with me, and make me those promises upon, which my life's happiness depends." George Maurice St. John strained Angelina McLaurin to his bosom.

"I will promise anything," he said: "what wouldst thou have me do? My life, my fortune, my honor, my all, I lay at your feet. Monkey with them as thou wilst."
"Then listen," said Angelina.

"George, we are to be wedded in month, are we not?" "We are," he cried exultantly, and again he essayed a half Nelson, and attempted to have sold to better advantage. Steers sold to-day at $3.50@5.50; cows and bulls, $1.25@3.50; Texans, $1.80@3.50; Westerns, $2@4.10.

About 22,000 hogs were offered to-day, including 5,000 left over last night. The demand was again brisk, and the offerings bury his nose in her mane. "Don't get gay, George," she said mournfully, as she broke the dangerous lock and gently but firmly pushed his bows off a point; "don't get funny, but hear me." "Go on." said George, and his tone showed that his failure pierced him like a javelin.

"We are to be wedded in a month; what "George," said Angelina, and the tear jewels shone in her eyes, "do not think me unworthy, but you know how I'm fixed. Father and mother both dead, I am an George, and must heel a handle

"Even so," said George, and his voice showed his sympathy.

"Then, George, before we take that step to the altar," she went on steadily enough, but with a quaver in her voice which his ear, made sensitive by a great love, did not fail to detect; "before we take that step, I say, from which there is no retreat, I must know certain things; you must make me certain promises." must make me certain promises."

"Go on," he whispered, and his voice overran her like a melody.

"Then, George," she said, "is it too much to ask that $100,000 worth of property be settled upon me at the jump?"

"My solicitors have already received my instructions to make it a million." George Maurice St. John's voice dwelt fondly on the statement. "It's but a beggarly ante to such a game as this." This time Angelina McLaurin did not decline his endearments. When he let up "And is it dead sure I go to the shore each summer? "It is a riveted cinch," he replied as he drew her nearer to him. "You take in the coast from Bar Harbor to the Florida

"And servants?" "A mob shall minister unto thee," he "Then I have but one more George," she murmured. "Grant that and "Board the card," cried George. "I promise before you ask."

"Say not so," she said, with a sweet sadness, "but muzzle your lip and listen. You must quit smoking."

CINCINNATI, Oct. 5.—Cattle steady at $2.25@5. Receipts, 200; shipments, 200.

as he strode up and down the library. At last he paused before her. "Woman," he said sternly, "look at me. Is this some lightsome bluff, or does it go? "Aye, I mean it," answered Angelina, while her cheek paled and her breath came quick and fast. "Don't make no mistake on that, Cull, I mean it. My talk goes, and my hand is off my chips."

"Is this your love?" he sneered bitterly.

"It is," she faltered. "I have spoken, and I abide your answer."

"Then, girl," said George Maurice St. John, and his words were cold and hard, "all is over between us. You would drive Dost mean it, woman

"all is over between us. You would drive me into a corner and take away my cigars. I say 'No, no, a thousand times no.' "
At this harsh outbreak the curve in Angelina's nose became more intense. She dried her eyes. Her features, too, became as flint. She even cut loose a low, mock-"Be it so," she said. "Sirrah, take your

As he did so her strength failed her an she sank to the floor. "That knocked her out." he muttered and he started to count: "One-two-three "Oh! Not necessarily," she said, strug

"The die is cast." and as he spoke the fatal words the eyes of George Maurice St. John took on the firm, irrevocable ex-pression of a fish's set in death. "I would not give up tobacco for the best woman that ever pulled a dress on over her head. Maiden, you ask too much-you come to high. Damsel, I quit you dead!"

George Maurice St. John rushed from the scene. The ponderous door, as it slammed behind him, echoed and re-echoed through the vaulted apartments of the McLaurin mansion. Angelina McLaurin listened until his footsteps died away far up Rhode Island avenue.

"He has flew the coop on me," she wailed. Then she gave way to a torrent of tears. In her distress Angelina McLaurin was more beautiful than ever. Two minutesfive minutes-ten minutes went by; her tears'still fell like rain. "I have turned the hose on my hopes." This was the thought that crossed her mind; but she desperately womanned (word coined since the advent of the new woman) herself to bear it.

Still afloat on the sad current of her tears, her head bowed; a light sound caught the tympanum of Angelina Mc-Laurin. She looked quickly up and squared herself to emit a glad cry if one should be What was it? Something had come back.

True-it was the Angora cat. As he dumped himself on the rug with ar air of reckless abandon Angelina McLaurin gazed at him with a wistful fixedness One eye was closed; his fur was torn; blood dripped from his lascerated ears. He was a badly bunged-up Angora. Angelina McLaurin laughed long and wildly. "He, too, has got it in the neck!" -Washington Post.
